OVERCOME BY GAS; DIED IN THE NIGHT

Mrs. Ernestine Sherer, Age 81, Found Dead This Morning From Effects of Escaping Gas.

The fourth case of death by asphyxiation in this city, within two months, was discovered at eight o'clock this morning when Mrs. Ernestine Sherer, 81, South Lincoln street, was found dead in her bed. The cause of death was asphyxiation from the effects of escaping gas. The gas had leaked from a pipe in the kitchen and had filled the room. The gas had leaked from a pipe in the kitchen and had filled the room. The gas had leaked from a pipe in the kitchen and had filled the room.

Death is attributed to an accident and an investigation fully bears out the fact that Mrs. Sherer accidentally turned on the gas in the kitchen. The gas had leaked from a pipe in the kitchen and had filled the room. The gas had leaked from a pipe in the kitchen and had filled the room. The gas had leaked from a pipe in the kitchen and had filled the room.

Although there was but a small amount of gas in the room, the age of Mrs. Sherer and her poor health of late made her very susceptible to the effects of the gas. The gas had leaked from a pipe in the kitchen and had filled the room. The gas had leaked from a pipe in the kitchen and had filled the room. The gas had leaked from a pipe in the kitchen and had filled the room.

The deceased had reached her state of unconsciousness for the last few years and had been in poor health. The gas had leaked from a pipe in the kitchen and had filled the room. DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—How Could Father Suggest Such a Thing?

BY F. LEIPZIGER

The CALL of the CUMBERLANDS

BY CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK
WITH ILLUSTRATIONS FROM PHOTOGRAPHS OF SCENES IN THE PLAY

"Come and get him," called Hollman and Purry, hypocritical clamoring for the sanctity of the law. Hollman and Purry were now a fortress, prepared for fight. They knew that every trail in the woods was a trap. Also they knew the color of the law on their side. The circuit judge, through the sheriff, had ordered the river bank below the bridge. A detail under a white flag went out after Tamarack Spier. The militia captain in command, who feared neither bullet nor death, was confidently received. He had brains, and he assured them that he acted under orders which could not be disobeyed. Unless they surrendered the prisoner, killing would follow. If necessary they would be dressed behind as Indians. Many of them might be killed, but for each of them the state had another. If Spier would surrender, the officer would guarantee him personal protection, and if it seemed necessary, a change of venue would secure him trial in another circuit. For hours the clan deliberated. For the soldiers they felt no enmity. For the young captain they felt an instinctive liking. He was a man.

Old Spier South, restored to an echo of his former robustness by the call of action, gave the clan's verdict. "Hill hadn't the core we're scared of. If this boy goes for town he won't never get into no cot. He'll be murdered."

The officer held out his hand. "As man to man," he said, "I pledge you my word that no one shall take him except by process of law. I'm not waiting for the Hollmans or the Purrys. I know their breed."

For a space old South looked into the soldier's eyes and the soldier looked back.

"You take your handshake on that bargain," said the mountain man, gravely. "Tamarack," he added, in a voice of finality, "you've got to go."

The officer had meant what he said. He marched his prisoner into Hixon at the center of a hollow square, with muskets at the ready. And yet, as the boy passed into the courthouse yard, with a soldier rubbing elbows on each side, a cleanly aimed shot sounded from somewhere. The smokeless powder did not take, and with blue shirt and army hat cowering him, Tamarack fell and died.

That afternoon one of Hollman's henchmen was found lying in the road with his lifeless face in the water of the creek. The next day, an old Spier South stood at the door of his cabin, a rifle backed from the hillside, and he felt that through the left shoulder of a bullet intended for his heart. All this while the troops were helplessly camped at Hixon. They had power and inclination to go out and get men, but there was no man to get.

The Hollmans had used the soldiers as far as they wished; they had made them pull the chestnuts out of the fire and Tamarack Spier out of his stronghold. They now refused to wear out additional warfairs. A detail had rushed into Hollman's store an instant after the shot which killed Tamarack was fired. Except for a woman buying a cord of buttons and a fair-haired clerk waiting on her, they found the building empty.

Back beyond the hills were impene- trable, and answered no questions. Old Spier South would ten years ago have had a bandage on his wound and gone about his business, but now he looked under his patchwork quilt, and brother Spier expressed grave doubts for his recovery. With his common sense, assumed something like the power of a repent and took upon himself the duties to which Sam- son should have succeeded.

That a Hollman should have been able to elude the pickets and penetrate the heart of South territory to Spier South's cabin was both astounding and alarming. The war was on without question now, and there must be com- munication for the family heads to meet that afternoon at his mill. It was sat- urday—saturday—and in accordance with ancient custom the ladies would be more traveled than usual.

Those men who came by the wagon read afforded no unusual spectacle, for behind each saddle sagged a sack of grain. Their faces bore no stamp of uncontented excitement, but every man balanced a rifle across his point. Some the less, their purpose was plain, and their talk when they had gathered was to the point.

Old McFarner, himself sorely per- plexed, voiced the sentiment that the others had been too courteous to ex- press. With Spier South bedridden and Samson a renegade, they had no adequate leader. McFarner was a solid man of intrepid courage and honesty, but without guile was his vocation, not strategy and tactics. The enemy had such masters of intrigue as Purry and Judge Hollman.

Then a lean, scrawny man came jog- ging into view, switching her fly-bitten tail, and on the mare's back, trailing him with a long, leafy switch, sat a woman. Behind her sagged the two loaded ends of a corn cask. She was lithe and slim, and her violet eyes were profoundly serious, and her lips were as resolutely set as Joan of Arc's might have been, for Emily Miller had come only ostensibly to have her corn ground to meal. She had really come to speak for the absent chief, and she knew that she would be met with derision. The years had sobered the girl, but her beauty had increased, though it was now a chastened type, which gave her a strange and rather exalted refinement of expression.

Wile McFarner came to the mill door as she rode up and lifted the sack from her horse.

"Howdy, Sally?" he greeted.

"Tallabie, thank ye," said Sally. "I'm goin' ter get off."

As she entered the great half-lighted room, where the mill stones creaked on their cumbersome shafts, the hum of discussion sank to silence. The girl nodded to the mountaineers gath- ered in concave, then, turning to the miller, she announced:

"I'm going to send for Samson."

The statement was at first met with dead silence, then came a rumble of indignant dissent, but for that the girl was prepared, as she was prepared for the contemptuous laughter which followed.

"I reckon if Samson was here," she said, dryly, "you all wouldn't think it was quite so funny."

Old Caleb Wiley spat, through his bristling beard, and his voice was a quavering rumble.

"What we wants is a man. We hain't got no use fer no traitors that's too al- mighty damn busy doin' fancy work ter stand by their kith an' kin."

"What he he at?" demanded old Ca- leb Wiley, in a truculent voice.

"That's his business," Sally flashed back. "But I know. All I want to tell you is this. Don't you make a move (H) I have time to get word to him. I tell you, he's got to have his say."

"I reckon we hain't a-goin' ter wait," sneered Caleb. "For a feller that won't let his be known what he's a-joornin' at. If ye air so shore of him, why won't ye tell us what he is now?"

"That's my business, too," Sally's voice was resolute. "I've got a letter here—I'll take two days to get to Samson. I'll take him two or three days more to get here. You've got to wait a week."

"Sally," the temporary chieftain spoke still in a patient, humoring sort of voice, as to a tempestuous child, "thar hain't no place ter mail a letter nigher than Hixon. No South can't ride inter Hixon, an' ride out again. The mail carrier won't be down this way fer two days yet."

"I'm not waitin' any South to ride into Hixon. I recollect another time when Samson was the only one that would do that," she answered, still ac- cusingly. "I didn't come here to ask favors. I come to give orders—for him. A train leaves soon in the morn- ing. My letter's goin' on that train."

"Who's goin' ter take hit ter town fer ye?"

"I'm goin' to take it for myself," Her reply was given as a matter of course.

"That wouldn't hardly be safe, Sally," the miller demurred; "this hain't no time fer a gal ter be galavanti' around by herself in the night time. Hit's a-comin' up ter storm, an' ye've got thirty miles ter ride, an' thirty-five back ter yore house."

"I'm not scared," she replied. "I'm goin' an' I'm warnin' you now, if ye do anything that Samson don't like, ye'll have to answer to him, when he comes." She turned, walking very erect and dauntless to her corral mare, and disappeared at a gallop.

"I reckon," said Wile McFarner, breaking silence at last. "Hit don't make no great difference. He won't hardly come, now." Then, he added: "But that boy is smart."

Samson's return from Europe, after a year's study, was in the nature of a moderate triumph. With the art sponsorship of George Leecott and the social sponsorship of Adrienne, he found that orders for portraits, from those who could pay munificently, seemed to seek him. He was fasting the novelty of being looked.

That summer Mrs. Leecott opened her house on Long Island early, and the life there was full of the sort of gaiety that comes to pleasant places when young men in fannels and girls in soft summery gowns and tanned cheeks are playing wholesomely and blithely (and making love—not too seriously).

Samson, tremendously busy these days in a new studio of his own, had run over for a week. Horton was, of course, of the party, and George Leecott was doing the honors as host.

One evening Adrienne left the dance- ers for the pergola, where she took refuge under a mass of honeysuckle.

Samson South followed her. She saw him coming, and smiled. She was contracting this Samson, loosely called in fannels, with the Samson she had first seen riding awkwardly to greet her in the studio.

"You should have stayed inside and made yourself agreeable to the girls," Adrienne reproved him, as he came up. "What's the use of making a lion of you, if you won't roar for the vi- sitors?"

"I've been roaring," laughed the man. "I've just been explaining to Miss Willoughby that we only eat the people we kill in Kentucky on certain days of solemn observance and sacri- fice. I wanted to be agreeable to you, Drennie, for a while."

"Do you ever and yourself homesick, Samson, these days?"

The man answered with a short laugh. Then his words came softly, and not his own words, but those of one more eloquent:

"Who had desired the sea? Her ex- cellent loneliness rather. Then the forecourt of kings, and her uttermost pits than the streets where men gather."

His sea that his being fulfilled? So and no otherwise—no and no other. "I've hilted desire their hills," "And yet," she said, and a trace of the argumentative stole into her voice, "you haven't gone back."

"No." There was a note of self-reproach in his voice. "But soon I shall go. At least, for a time. I've been thinking a great deal lately about 'my fluttered folk and wild.' I'm just beginning to understand my relation to them, and my duty."

there and 'throw away' your life," and found herself instantly contending. "That it is the duty of the young eagle, who has learned to fly, to go back to the nest where he was hatched."

"But, Drennie," he said, gently, "sup- pose the young eagle is the only one that knows how to fly—and suppose he could teach the others? Don't you see? I've only seen it myself for a little while."

"What is it that you see now?" "I must go back, not to retrace, but to come to be a constructive force. I must carry some of the outside world to misery. I must take to them, be- cause I am one of them, gifts that they would reject from other hands."

From the house came the strains of an alluring waltz. For a little time they listened without speech, then the girl said very gravely:

"You won't—you won't still feel bound to kill your enemies, will you, Samson?"

The man's face hardened. "I believe I'd rather not talk about that. I shall have to win back the confidence I have lost. I shall have to take a place at the head of my clan by proving myself a man—and a man by their own standards. It is only at their head that I can lead them. If the lives of a few innocents have to be forfeited I shan't hesitate at that. I shall stake my own against them fairly. The end is worth it."

The girl breathed deeply, then she heard Samson's voice again.

"Drennie, I want you to understand that if I succeed it is your success. You took me raw and unflinching, and you have made me. There is no way of thanking you."

"There is a way," she contradicted. "You can thank me by feeling just this way about it."

"Then I do thank you."

The next afternoon Adrienne and Samson were sitting with a gayly chat- tering group at the side lines of the tennis courts.

Dinner Stories

On the third day of his Aunt Jane's visit to the city Jones took her for a ride in his high-powered motor. They had proceeded only a mile or so when something happened. "Hooray the luck!" exclaimed Jones. "Goodness! What's wrong?" said Aunt Jane. "Engine's missing," was the terse reply. "Dear me," said Aunt Jane. "I do hope it's been found by an honest person. Where do you suppose we dropped it?"

The London consul of a continental kingdom was informed by his govern- ment that one of his country- women, supposed to be living in Great Britain, had been left a large fortune. After advertising without result he applied to the police, and a clever young detective was set to work. A few weeks later his chief asked him how he was getting on. "I've found the lady, sir," "Good! Where is she?" "At my place. I married her yesterday."

The late Justice Brewer was with a party of New York friends on a holiday trip in the Adirondacks, and around the campfire one evening the talk naturally ran to big fish. "When it came his turn the jurist began, uncertain as to how he was going to come out. 'We are fishing one time on the Grand Banks for—' for—' 'Whales,' somebody suggested. 'No,' said the justice, 'we were baiting with whales.'

Fragrance of Flowers.
Flowers are more fragrant when the sun is not shining on them, ac- cording to a French scientist, because the oils that produce the perfume are forced out by the water pressure in the plant cells and this is diminished by sunlight.

Remarkable Fireplace.
In one of the camps on the shore of Lake Sebago there is a fireplace containing 60 rocks, every one of which bears the likeness of the face of a man or animal. The rocks have been collected from many miles around, and the effect is heightened by glass eyes which have been added.

DR. HARPER PRAISES NEW PLUMBING LAW IN ANNUAL REPORT

Measure Now in Effect Will Result in Marked Improvements in Sanitation
Board of Health Claims.

2,180 plumbers of Wisconsin have received state licenses. 20 cities of Wisconsin have been visited by the state plumbing inspector. 27 public meetings have been held in connection with the enforcement of the new plumbing law. 182 new plumbing installations have been inspected. 14 out of 18 cities in the state visited by law to apply plumbing inspectors have complied. 25 cities of the state are required to have their plumbers licensed by the state and practically all their resident plumbers have complied. 26 cities were found to have local plumbing ordinances and 24 asked the assistance of the state board of health in formulating or amending local ordinances.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Madison, Wis., Dec. 11.—The above and many other interesting facts are the result of a little over a year's work of the plumbing division of the state board of health. The biennial report of Dr. C. A. Harper, state health officer, will contain this data. The new plumbing law adopted by the last legislature and which became operative Oct. 2, 1913, has resulted in some marked improvements in the sanitary and plumbing conditions of the state.

The object of the plumbing law was to require the licensing of all plumbers, journeymen, masters and contractors, in cities of over 6,000, who had the necessary qualifications; to enforce and inspect plumbing installations; and to adopt and enforce a state plumbing code, which should establish a minimum standard of plumbing in Wisconsin. According to the biennial report of the state health officer, the plumbing law has been enforced practically throughout the state. There are thirty-five cities which come under the license feature, where it is a violation of the law for a plumber to engage in business without the license issued by the state board of health. The license feature is in force in the first, second and third classes, having a population of 5,000 or more. Those of less than 5,000 population are exempt from license, although plumbers residing there can secure licenses under the same regulations as in larger places.

Of the 2,180 plumbers in Wisconsin now holding state licenses 432 are plumbing contractors, doing in plumbing work and having a shop or place of business in addition to installing plumbing; 624 master plumbers, or those supervising installations and the journeymen plumbers.

The law requires that all licenses issued during any one year shall be renewed by or before December 31st of that year. Hence this is a busy month in the plumbing division of the state board of health as hundreds of renewed applications are coming from plumbers who expect to continue their work in 1915. Within the last few weeks 499 plumbers have paid their renewal fees for 1915, amounting to $2,300. The rates are $25 each for contractors, $5 for masters and $1 for journeymen. As there is a low season in the plumbing business, which the balance of the year, plumbers must be received, a rush in renewal work is anticipated by the state board of health.

According to the annual report, since the enactment of the law, Frank H. King, the state plumbing inspector, has visited thirty-nine cities of Wisconsin for the purpose of explaining the provisions of the code and making inspections of plumbing and drainage installations. At twenty-seven of these places public meetings were held, attended by city officials, plumbers and the general public. Some 182 installations were inspected and 41 instances found where installations were of improper design or construction, many workmanship and inferior material. Through the provisions of the state plumbing code the state health board seeks to do away with such conditions.

There are thirteen cities in Wisconsin under which the law requires a local inspector to be appointed. Of these fourteen cities and four villages have provided for local plumbing inspectors and plumbers inspection of other in accordance with the state code or a local code. A majority of the cities of Wisconsin, says the report, have local ordinances providing that cesspools shall not be located in any public street, avenue, lane, alley or sidewalk. These ordinances, however, do not take into consideration the location of cesspools near wells.

A total of 84 public sewer systems are found in cities and villages of the state, with a total of 131 municipal water systems and 27 private water systems.

POINTS TO DEFECTS IN PAGAN RELIGIONS

Evangelist Barrett Uses Process of Elimination to Prove Supremacy of Christianity.

Special music was one of the features of the revival meeting at the Methodist church last night, the Agnes quartet rendering two numbers. Among other things, he said, "Jesus is very autocratic in His teaching. He says, 'By Me'—Man is a religious animal, he must have some religion. To any Christian it must be the religion of Christ. That or none. There is nothing in Paganism."

"We cannot turn to Judaism, Judaism is nothing but a promiscuous polytheism. If Christ is not the Messiah, this note is 2,000 years past due, and daily becoming more worthless and hopeless."

"We cannot go to Mahomet, riding armor-clad and blood stained, leading us to a life of revenge, and a heaven of sensuality."

"We cannot accept Brahmanism, with its vedas and its Hindu gods, with its meta-physical quibbles and its social tyrannies. Every woman, and every man with a wife, or sister, or mother, or daughter will have no Brahmanism."

"There is no God," for then would nature's heart cease to beat, and we could only stand orphaned by its mighty corpse."

Evangelist Barrett shares His honors with no colleague, no voice with Moses, a Zoroaster, Confucius, Mohammed, angel or virgin. Mr. Barrett will speak on "The Conversion of a Noted Infidel" tonight.

SHOT FROM HOWITZER DESTROYED AEROPLANE FEARED BY THE GERMANS.

(Correspondence of The A. P.) Berlin, Dec. 11.—A small French aeroplane—the "Bauernschreck," which translated means "the peasants' terror," is no more and great is the rejoicing threat among one wing of the German army which it had disturbed much.

For a long period, every evening about 5 o'clock, the machine used to appear over the trenches south of Rheims, drop, just one bomb, which never failed to scatter death and destruction, and then disappear. German aviators ascended repeatedly and made futile attempts to bring down the dangerous visitor. It was evident that the machine carried a murderous machine gun and that its occupants were no mere marksmen.

Every aviator who pursued the "Bauernschreck" brought eagerly the honor of bringing it down, and as result of bravery shown in pursuit one non-commissioned officer won an iron cross but lost his life. After being shot through the hips by a gun in the French machine, he continued to pilot a German aeroplane for nine miles.

Finally a reserve artillery captain evolved a new base for a howitzer, so constructed as to permit great elevation and rapid change of objective and the machine shot from it finished the Bauernschreck. Both occupants were killed and mutilated beyond recognition. It could only be told that one was an officer and the other a civilian.

--And the Worst is yet to Come

An Exhortation to Steadfastness

By REV. L. W. COSNELL,
Assistant to the Dean, Moody Bible Institute
Chicago

These words were written by Paul when a prisoner at Rome. He was a Jew, addressing Gentile Christians at Philippi. What an evidence of the change Christ has made that a Jew can write thus to a Gentile: "My brethren, dearly beloved and longed for, my joy and crown."

Indeed, Paul was imprisoned as a result of his service to Gentiles.

An Appeal.

"We stand fast in the Lord." These words imply several things.

(1) They had enemies; otherwise they had not needed an exhortation to steadfastness. Many seem unaware that we wrestle "against principalities and powers in the heavenly places." Even modern spiritualism, so far as it is not fraudulent, suggests a great, shuddering world of evil spirits about us. While we shudder they restlessly oppose us, and we need to take the whole armor of God if we would stand. How besting this appeal in a day when many are slipping from their moorings of faith in the Word of God.

(2) They would need to progress if they were to stand fast. We gather this from the use of the word "so." This seems to send us back to the previous chapter where we see Paul, forgetting the things behind, pressing toward the mark for the prize; "so" we are to stand fast. In other words, we may not stand still if we are to stand fast; as in riding a bicycle, the only way to stand is to keep moving.

(3) They had a secure position; they were to stand fast "in the Lord." Reader, are you not in the church merely, but "in the Lord?" Maintaining our position there, we are secure. Charles Simeon, the Cambridge scholar and saint, exerted a marvelous influence in his day. In the early hours of the morning, he would be heard walking in his study or on the roof above it, and they knew he was having communion with God. Maintaining thus our position "in the Lord," we shall be steadfast.

The Argument.

Our text begins with "therefore." This leads us back to the verses preceding, and we find in them high encouragement to steadfastness.

(1) "Our conversation (citizenship, R. V.) is in heaven." Philippi was a Roman colony, and many of its inhabitants were citizens of Rome. This honor was highly appreciated, and they would have endured much for sake of it. To have our names in the Lamb's book, in the city of God, is worth any price which steadfastness may cost us.

(2) "From whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ." The word "look" indicates expectancy. Like a garriole looking out for reinforcements or a mother watching for her boy. Such an attitude toward the coming of the Savior was common in apostolic days, but is not so now. Perhaps this is partly explained by the fact that many think much of Christ coming as a judge and they are filled with terror. But the emphasis here is quite otherwise; we look for "the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ," and should not Christians desire his appearing? There have been stargazers who neglected practical duties, but they are no more scriptural than those who attend to other duties, but do not look for the Lord. "He gave to every man his work and commanded the porter to watch;" working and watching make the full program. Since Christ is coming we should stand fast.

(3) "Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body?" When Archbishop Whately was dying his chaplain read this passage to him. "Stop," said the archbishop, "not 'vile' body, but 'body of humiliation.'" Our bodies are not vile, but they do humble us. The transfiguration and the 40 days after the resurrection hint the glory that awaits us. Surely, we should stand fast!

(4) "He is able even to subdue all things unto himself." Voices shall be heard at least saying, "Alleluia; for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth." With such a helper we need not surrender. "So stand fast in the Lord."

"Hold the fort, for I am coming," Jesus eternally will.

"By thy grace we will!"

Pleasant Fields of Holy Writ

Save for my daily range
Among the pleasant fields of Holy Writ, —Tennyson.

The International Sunday-School Lesson.

Motto for this Week: Young man, my advice to you is that you cultivate an acquaintance with and a firm belief in the Holy Scriptures. This is your certain interest.—Jonathan Franklin, 1706-1709.

Fourth Quarter, Lesson XI, Matthew 28, 16-20; Luke 24, 34-49, December 13, 1914.

The Great Commission.

The traditional answer to all objections to foreign missions is that they are undertaken in implicit obedience to the direct command of Jesus. When the forty mystic days which intervened between the resurrection and ascension were ending, the Saviour met his disciples at the appointed rendezvous, the mountain of Galilee. This may have been the occasion also when the five hundred or thereabouts of the resurrection were present with the eleven apostles. There was a solemn recognition and adoration of the one who sat before them as the very original and true Lord, who was one doubtless, so now in this larger company there were several.

There were also some who were ready or assumedly ready to take in this instance, however, make no charge at all, so Jesus weighed every word and made no mistake. His last message is aptly called the "Great Commission." "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." That the living authority of the command is never to be disputed, he prefaced it with the words, "All power is given unto me in heaven and on the earth." "And lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." The traditional answer to objections against missions is the correct answer. This command, aptly called the "Duke of Wellington's" "marching orders," is a foundation broad enough to sustain the whole fabric of modern missions. It will be found sufficient to bear up the mightiest superstructure, in comparison with which the boasted alliance of today will appear a toy.

The exactions and sacrifices of this missionary cause are confessedly great. Money, $10,000,000, in round numbers, per annum from the United States alone; talent apparently needed at home; happiness—in the necessary surrendering of family life, through unwholesome influences, and violence of death. No abatement of these exactions can be anticipated in the near future. The circles of missionary effort are widening. Demand for men and money will keep pace. Yet, as the Church grows, the "marching orders," a half is impossible. From its purely humanitarian standpoint, the entire enterprise of missions is justified. In spite of the sacrifices involved, it aims, by the persuasion of love, to make an end of all the abuses of civilization—tribal wars, caste, widow-burnings, child marriage, killing of the aged. It seeks to abate human suffering and conserve life by the introduction of sanitation and the medical and surgical arts. Dispensaries, asylums, and schools are in the vanguard of this great work. While not thought to be a believer in Christianity, yet became an annual subscriber for life to a missionary society, the incidental introduction (through commerce and travel) of rum, opium, licentiousness—these things, can not be charged up against Christianity, and are only an additional and strong argument for the prosecution of Christian missions.

The astonishing boldness of Jesus, as exemplified in his last command, is humanly speaking, unduly in what Canon Liddell calls the "plan" of Jesus. "The great commission," in its very terms, embraces all time and the whole earth. "For I will be with you," Christ bequeathed to his Church the world, to be converted.

The Teacher's Lantern.

The discrimination between homo missionis and foreign missions is a competition between them is a vicious circle. The Lord's work is one. Anything but the Lord's work is not the Lord's work. A. J. Miller, that prince of comparative religionists, has an immortal paragraph on missions: "The very soul of our religion is missionary; progressive, world embracing; it would cease to exist if it ceased to be missionary. It is discarded the parting words of its founder, 'Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations,' etc. The spirit of truth is the life-spring of all religions; and where it exists, it must persuade, and self, it must plead, it must persuade, and must convince and convert. There must be times when silence is gold and speech silver; but there are times also when silence is dumb hand speech is life—the very life of Pentecost. Look at the religions in which the missionary spirit has been at work, which any attempt to convince with argument, to save souls, to bear witness to the truth, is treated with pity or scorn. The former are alive; the latter are dying or dead. The absolute ingenuities of the Bible narrative is illustrated by the phrase, 'But some doubted.' A section would not have admitted so derogatory an expression. It would have asserted that all worshipers of the dignity, importance, and obligation of the sacrament of baptism is evident in the fact that it is named in the very terms of the 'great commission.' . . . A pathetic interest attaches to last farewells. The value of the sentiments expressed, however, are often discounted by the delirious condition of the dying. The watchers also are often so consumed with anxiety that they do not remember these conditions prevailed in Jesus' farewell. . . . Upon the bustle of his suffering and death his death disciples are commissioned to call sinners to repentance, and the penitent announce the remission of sin. Jesus did not lead his disciples in person to the place of ascension. So many company (upwards of five hundred) would attract attention and defeat the esoteric purpose of the Master. Precipitation of the religion is an evil to be guarded against. There is virtue in tarrying. . . . Some believe that the apostles' declaration that they were his witnesses, 'in the presence of the Lord,' was a mere precaution. Repentance and forgiveness; Place, All nations; Guide, Scriptures. . . . Jesus did not send out orators or even teachers, but supremely witnesses. . . . Preaching should always begin where the preacher is whether it be Jerusalem or Chicago.

"Understanding shall bring wisdom." Wisdom is to be desired for. Like silver ore, it does not lie on the surface. One must apply his heart to it. The quest that has love in it is the one other thing being equal, that succeeds. God is both source of truth and of the faculty in man by which truth is apprehended.

Whitewater News

JUNTO CLUB ENTERTAINED FOR CITY FEDERATION.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Whitewater, Dec. 11.—The Junto club entertained the City Federation and their friends Thursday afternoon at the Normal kindergarten rooms. Mrs. Earl Cox opened the program with vocal selections which were much appreciated by the audience. Mrs. R. H. Dixon then recited "Madam Butterfly" in Japanese costume, and it was certainly a beautiful play and beautifully given. She was accompanied by Mrs. John Schell on the piano, which also added greatly to the play. Both Mrs. Dixon and Mrs. Schell wore costumes recently brought here from Japan by Agent H. W. W. (Whitewater). After the program light refreshments were served.

The Catholic Society had a large covered at their bazaar, Wednesday evening, taking in around $100. Miss Phronie Woyner has gone to Berkeley, Cal., to be with her sister, Mrs. Anna McDougall. The local wheat yards were closed Wednesday evening until further notice. The latest case of the foot and mouth disease developed on the Gleason farm just west of the city.

READY FOR DISTRIBUTION

Rested After His Run.

After a wild run in South Boston, in which the animal tore down about twenty feet of a wooden fence, smashed down a section of brick wall, broke a few windows in a schoolhouse, snapped off short a lamp post and crashed through a wooden gate, incidentally damaging the sides of two buildings, not to mention injuring the three men who were on the wagon, a horse attached to a brewery alleyway and when found was munching contentedly such grass as he could reach from his position.

WASHING WON'T RID HEAD OF DANDRUFF

Dissolve It, That's Best Way.

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips. Do this tonight, and by morning most of all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have. You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. If you want to preserve your hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for nothing destroys the hair more quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everyone notices it. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

PRINCE TO LEAVE ADOPTED COUNTRY

Prince Louis of Battenberg.

Prince Louis of Battenberg, removed from the position of first lord of the British admiralty for the one and only reason that he was of German birth, is arranging to leave England and go to Russia for an indefinite period. He will receive an enthusiastic welcome at the Russian court, where all the members of the Battenberg family are very popular.

blurred in question, seem not at all disturbed when necktie or carelessness is imputed to them. These latter somehow seem milder failings. But they are just as apt to make sorrow come of them.

The grief and disappointment of a small child is as important a thing as a greater sorrow in a grownup. "The little girl is smaller but so is the child's capacity to deal with it."

So you, M. C. Dean, learn how it feels to be a Good Fellow or a Big Sister. You will be asked to play the part of an assistant to Santa Claus. The Associated Charities will make the task an easy one for you for they will give you the names and addresses of the people to whom you will do the buying and distributing if you wish.

But there are some contributors who would prefer to be anonymous for an entire family according to their own inclination. They would like to be distributing themselves. The Associated Charities will be glad to such a plan. All that is necessary is to report to one of the officers, who will then select one of the families who have to be provided for. The society will give aid in finding just the sort of a family you wish to make happy and for whom you desire to give religious instruction.

The Associated Charities are confronted with the one big proposition—making this Christmas a merry and profitable time for every needy family which would otherwise have a cheerless holiday. They are willing to do the buying, planning and distribution of the work to individuals and other charitable and benevolent organizations such as churches and lodges. But the Associated Charities are going to do such work will report their intentions to the officers of the Associated Charities. Arrangements can be made so that the work can be covered systematically and well. No one will go without and there will

COLONY OF MOTHERLESS CHILDREN SUFFER FROM WINTER COLD AT ETRETAT.
(Correspondence of The A. P.)
Pavre, Dec. 11.—Accute distress is reported at Etretat in the colony of motherless children whose fathers have been called to the army. This colony, whose numbers are still growing, now contains 500 children of ages ranging from four to ten years. The sudden change from a pleasant autumn to the first of the winter's storms, with cold, sharp weather, has caused much suffering among the little ones, owing to lack of sufficient wearing apparel and bed clothes.

The town of Etretat, about twelve miles from Havre, lies on the exposed coast and is swept by winds and sea fogs during the winter. Between the
